

Trumpet Lessons

A graduate of Carnegie Mellon University, Drew Fennell is a seasoned professional trumpet player and teacher living in Natrona Heights, PA. His busy playing career runs the gamut from classical to jazz, and he has performed all over the United States and internationally with groups including the River City Brass Band and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. He has contributed to dozens of recordings as a player, as an arranger/composer, as conductor and as producer. His students have achieved state and national honors at the high school level, and gone on to the college and professional ranks with great success.

A course of study is tailored specifically to each student, with the ultimate goal of achieving his or her maximum potential. Lessons include:

- learning proper playing technique,
- development of range and flexibility,
- aural development (ear training),
- exploration of principles of musicianship,
- study of basic music theory, and
- becoming generally well-rounded musicians.
